MISCELLANY.

[From the Once a-Week.] The Omens.

Oh, when I went a-wooing
To win my darling Msy.
'Twas in a sunny island,
An island far away,
Where skies are blue forever,
Where earth is always gayl

And as I went a-wooing, I met with omens three An engle sky-ward soaring, A cushat on a tree, There sat and coo'd a leve-song, A love-song unto me.

The third, an emerald serpent, That wrought no ill to man, Slid through the blossom'd jungle To where a brocklet ran, A little brook that merrily A song of joy beganl

And all these happy creatures Had voices unto me; The eagel scaring skyward, The cushat on the tree, The snake and laughing brooklet, Gave counsel fair and free.

Bo wise as I, the snake said, To choose your darling May; The engle; Bold and ready Be to bear your prize away; Nor lose the golden moments

In profitless delayl And when your May is chosen,
Thus did the cushat coo,
Like me, be constant ever,
Be tender and be true;
For well I kaow your darling

Will still be true to you. The brooklet prattled blithely, As on it ran apaco—
When home you bring your darling
That chosen spot to grace,
Let mirth and joy and leisure
Have there abiding placel

And thus I went a-wooiag, And thus it did hetide, The tender-hearted maiden Became my winsome bride: And denr is she, far dearer Than all the world beside!

BESSIE WOODFORD'S ROMANCE

An English Story.

CHAPTER I.

My eister Lilian and myself had been or a visit to our Uncle and Annt Bourne, in the little town of II—y, and much we had enjoyed ourselves, and with good reason too, for my uncle and aunt, although generally very quiet people, emerged from their retire ment, in order to escort us to the different balls and parties to which we were invited; and they were many, for (let it not be ac-counted vanity) it was well known that we possessed certain golden attractions, besides being the Misses Woodford, of Woodford, and our father an M. It was the evening of our return that l followed my mother to her dressing-room and there, kneeling before her, with my arms clasped round her waist, I told her o ny happiness. "Bessie, dear," she said, "to no one would I rather trust my child than to Walter Ashton. I know him to be all that is good and noble; but your father is ambitions, and looks higher. I fear, my darling, he will not be pleased."

"What!" I cried, starting to my feet, "does he put riches and a title before true, honest love? Is affection to be sacrificed to what he calls 'a good position?' No, no; he would not be so mean, so cruel." Thus I went on, not heeding, in my ex

The production of Florida is small, and from Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas a large part of the cotton had been transported before the close of the war. The south-eastern States will furnish 300,000 bales more.

In the western part of Texas much of the cotton had found an outlet through Mexico, but from the middle and north-eastern portion the production had been large.

The present year's crops will add but little to the resources of the Southern States.

Peace came too late in the season to induce planting, and the low price of cotton, compared with that of corn and provisions, discouraged its production. In a journey of three hundred miles through part of the State, I saw but one field of cotton, and reminutes, without blinking; then heaving a ports from every part of the country are the heavy sigh, and exclaiming, "I dare not say same. It was moved to substitute the following minority report offered by Mr. Trotter: Beit Ordained, That the ordinanco of secessio adopted by a convention of the people of this State, on the 9th day of January, 1861, hc, and the same is hereby abrogated.

The mover of this claimed that by the adoption of the majority report we would not only deny all right of secession, but also of revolution, It would be virtually easting a stigma on those who composed the convention of 1861, as well as those who believed ns it did.

Mr. Trotter defended the motion at great length. His nrgumeut, which was the most subile of any produced nn that side, was anbetantially as follows: The question, which concerns the proper disposition to be made of the ordinance under ennsideration, must be settled, in some form, by this Convention. The ground taken by the majority report is that the Convention which ordained the ordinance of secesion had no authority to do so. A minority of the committee, however, believed that, whether the ordinance of seccesion was lawful or not-or, in other words, whether the State of Mississippi, acting in her sovereign capacity as a State, had n right to dissolve her connection with the other States of the Uniou and resume the powers delegated to her by the terms of the compact—that the action condemned was nevertheless an exertion of power by n sovereign State which, regarded merely as a revolutionary measure, was sufficient to command the obedience of her citizens and to excuse and justify them. The ordinance created a government in fact, if not in law, and according to the well settled principles of public law, and the decisions of the courts of every civilized nation, the citizens of that government were not only excusable for obeying its authority, but were bound to do so. They had no option. Possession in this case, as in the case of the right of property, is prima facie evidence of good title. The community at large are not supposed to be capable of deciding grave and complicated questions of this sort. Wretched, indeed, would they be if the rightful government should punish for ohedieuce to the powers being, as the powers being certainly would do for dieobedience. have decided the validity of the ordinance. The State has been compelled to yield her pretensions, and recede from the stand maintained, and the people of the State desire to see it finally repenled and numitled by the action of this hody. This can be done without the use of such phraseology as will unnecessarily place the seal of censure and condemnation upon our predecessors. 'The ordinance has been crushed by the physical no concern about the reasoning of this body, Judge Stone (Democrat and native of Ver mont,) was sensitive on the State Rights question. He apprehended that great disaffection would arise from the adoption of the majority report. He did not believe there could be such a thing as rebellion in a Re public. It was civil war. By adopting the report of the majority we would hang Jeff. Davis and all those who were yet in Northern prisons, together with all those who had not yet been pardoued, while we were here enjoying ourselves under the protection of the amnesty oath. We could not do this with a very good grace. He did not believe it was the intention to punish Davis, but thought his trial was put off to bring about the action which is now going on in this convention. Let us look to that.

Several members who voted in the negative explained that they were not in favor of session, nor did they defend the ordinance, but they were op posed to stigmatizing the action of their predecessors who passed the ordinance.

Mr. Blair's Speech.

We perceive that in a recent speech made by Mr. Montgomery Blair, as a candidate for congress in the worst copperhead district of Maryland, he not only rails at Mr. Sew ard, but accuses Mr. E. M. Stanton and Mr. Joseph Holt of having favored and encourpowers of the United States, and I am of aged the rebels during all the latter period the opinion that they will give themselves of Mr. Buchanan's administration, of which, hoth Mr. Holt and Mr. Stanton were meurbers. In the case of Mr. Holt, Mr. Blair's accusation is founded upon a letter expressing disloyal sentiments, attributed to Mr. Holt, and said to have been dated Nov. 30, 1860.

resources of nature here are equally balanced. The agricultural wealth of the south is complemented by vast mineral treasures on the north, and for the convenience of both is provided an equivalent artery of water transportation-the main duct of Mobile and its branching veins of the Alabama and Tombigbee. There is no richer soil in the world than that of the prairie counties while northeast, across the upper half of fine beds of iron and other ores in Bibb, beds of unsurpassed marble are waiting near Talladega for the enterprise of a new regime, and the upper portions of all streams afford abundant water power. For instance, the loosa falls a thousand feet or five feet a mile, so abruptly as in spring to heap up its floods at the change of plane at Tuscaloosa fifty feet deep.

Isn't it significant that heretofore all coal used in the State was brought from the North, when nature has so richly provided a rival store at home; while at this time there is not probably a marble structure in from quarries as distant as Vermont. Albeit there is better marble at Talledaga so couvenient to either Montgomery or Selma, whence water transportation clear to New York ought to enable Alabama marble to inderbid even that of Vermant.

We will hereafter publish all the facts ir connection with this matter.

Affairs in Kentucky.

The Cincinnati Commercial seems to be giving especial attention of late to Kentucky affairs. It is not at all pleased with them, at least so far as Union men are the actors in them. It eagerly jumps at and triumphantly publishes every fling at them from a disloyal pen or the lips of a secesh sympothizer. In Tuesday's issue, in an arlicle with the above caption, the Commercial publishes and endorses a private letter from Lexington, giving a pretended account of the quashing of some malignant indictments, found by the Grand Jury of Fayette county, by Judge Goodloe. This letter which, according to the Commercial, is "well entitled to credence," says that Judge Goodloe's charge to the Jury bad "no hint or whis-Accounts from the plains state that the per as to the examining into the charges of military interference."
